

The writing of this poem was inspired by a text message I received from a fellow teacher. I had presented her with some amaranth seeds years before, and she had just harvested the plant (seen in the photo that accompanies the picture). You reap what you sow, literally as well as figuratively.